Small Steps

A short sample book for the inPace tour. Each chapter is a part of the course, and each section is a lesson that shows only its own pages.

Chapter 1: Learning a little every day

This chapter has two short sections.

1.1 Why small steps work

Big goals are easy to start and hard to keep. A small step you can take every day is the opposite: it is easy to keep, and it adds up. Ten minutes a day is more than an hour a week, and it never feels heavy.

When a step is small, missing a day doesn't break you. You just take the next step tomorrow.

Try it: pick one lesson for today, set a timer for ten minutes, and stop when it rings. Tomorrow, do it again.

1.2 Pick a time, not a mood

Waiting until you feel like studying means waiting a long time. Instead, pick a time, like after dinner, and let a reminder do the remembering for you.

In inPace, open Reminders and choose the time and the days. An alarm keeps ringing until you stop it.

Good times are the ones that already exist in your day: right after dinner, on the bus, or before you open your phone in the morning.

Chapter 2: Practice that sticks

This chapter has two short sections.

2.1 Explain it in your own words

If you can explain an idea simply, you understand it. If you can't, you have found exactly what to review.

That's why many inPace modules ask you to write a short explanation before you move on.

Write as if you were telling a friend. Short sentences, one idea at a time, and an example from your own life.

2.2 Come back to old questions

Memory fades fast at first and slower later. Seeing a question again after one day, then three days, then a week, keeps it for good. inPace's daily review does this for you.

A review takes a few minutes. Answer what you can, and the questions you miss come back sooner.

Chapter 3: Someone in your corner

This chapter has two short sections.

3.1 Why a checker helps

We keep promises to other people better than promises to ourselves. A checker is someone you trust who looks at your milestones and says: well done.

Your checker doesn't need to know the subject. They see what you did, when you did it, and your own words about it.

3.2 Proof you can trust

Each milestone is signed and linked to the one before it, so your history can't be quietly changed. Your checker's inPace checks every signature before they approve.

So when your checker approves a milestone, you both know it's real. That's a record you can be proud of.
